Birthday Party Planning Checklist

One to Three Months Before

- Discuss with your child what kind of party he or she wants.
Dinosaur party? A celebration of all things Dora? Let your child help pick; the theme will help narrow down decoration and activity choices.

- Decide whom to invite.
Do you need to ask the entire class, or does your child just want his or her six best friends? The type of party may dictate how many kids you can host (in other words, a Guitar Hero competition may work best with fewer contestants).

- Line up any entertainment or venue you may want
The earlier the better—it's no fun telling your child that Conrad the magician is already booked. If booking another entertainer ask for references of people who have used the entertainers recently. Conrad and his team, work with dozens of entertainers and would happily recommend a performer. In booking a venue find one that specializes in family events.

Four Weeks Before

- Before setting a date, check with essential guests to make sure they're available.
Your child won't be happy if their best friend is going to be out of town.

Birthday Party Planning Checklist

Send invitations

Make written invitations or get some printed. Be sure to indicate whether parents are invited to stay (parents of toddlers should remain), and include an RSVP date and start and end times of the party.

Make a schedule of activities for the party

If you are holding the party in your home plan to fill two to three hours with a mix of energetic games and calmer activities (like crafts or story telling). You also need to factor in time for entertainment, snacks, and general freewheeling ruckus. If you have an entertainer it's best to have cake served after the performance. If the presents will be opened, save that for the end; if you start running out of time, you can skip it. Keep in mind that an outdoor party may become an indoor party in case of rain, so plan alternate, rainy-day activities

Make a master list of supplies you'll need

Make sure you have the following covered, and note if you need to buy or borrow anything. Check online party ware sources like plumparty.com and discountschoolsupply.com to save time.

Possible Supplies:

- game and craft essentials
  - music
  - sports equipment
- portable tables to hold food or presents
  - coolers and serving dishes
    - Tablecloths
  - plates, cups, and utensils

Buy or order party favors that fit the theme (and goody bags to put them in) and prizes for the games.

*Some entertainers like Conrad offer party favors as add-on to their services. If you book The Magic Of Conrad ask about our Balloon Candy Cups!

Birthday Party Planning Checklist

Three Weeks Before

Plan the Menu

Keep it simple—finger foods, pizza, things kids actually like are super easy and sure to please. If you like, plan a few special treats for parents. Make a list of how far in advance each dish can be made.

Make a grocery list.

You don't want to get to the day of the party and realize you forgot the cheese for the pizza. If you are ordering food now is the time to find your caterer and place your order.

Line up any help you may need.

Enlist friends, older children, other relatives, or parents of party guests to help supervise activities. Consider hiring a high school student, your baby-sitter, or a professional to help with pre- or post-party cleaning or to help supervise games, replenish food, and generally take some weight off your shoulders.

One Week Before

Clean the house thoroughly.

This way, you'll need only a quick once-over before the party.

For an outdoor party, do any major yard cleanup or planting.

Follow up on RSVP stragglers to get a final count.

Develop a detailed cooking schedule.

Make any foods that can be frozen.

One Week Before continued

Order the cake.

If you are making it from scratch, bake the layers and freeze them (you'll ice it the day before the party).

Order Balloons.

Check your list of needed supplies and procure any missing pieces.

Three Days Before

Find a place for coats.

Make space in a hall closet and fill it with presentable hangers or designate a bed for coats (and make sure the room's free of breakables).

Go grocery shopping..

Do a safety run-through of the house and yard.

Make sure danger areas like stairs and upper-floor windows (and pools) are safeguarded, double check that any chemicals are locked away, and check for sharp-edged corners on furniture that might be dangerous.

Prepare the cameras.

Charge video and digital cameras. Stock up on extra film or memory cards.

Prepare goody bags..

Birthday Party Planning Checklist

One Day Before

- For an outdoor party, mow the lawn and tidy the yard.
- Organize the furniture.
Set up dining and gift tables and activity stations. If you find you're missing anything (pencils for games, etc.), you have time to run out and get it.
- Decorate!
Do everything that doesn't involve helium.
- Finish as much of the cooking as you can.
This includes defrosting and icing the cake if you froze one. Also, for any foods that require cooking on party day, do as much prep (dicing, marinating, rinsing lettuce) as possible.
- Do a touch-up cleaning sweep through the house.
- If opening presents is on the agenda, practice polite "thank you's" with your child.
- Relax.
You have planned for this. It's ok if everything is not perfect what matters is you enjoying the day with your child.

Birthday Party Planning Checklist

Day Of The Party

- Finish any last-minute cooking.
- Pick up cake and balloons, if ordered.
- Display food.
One to two hours before guests arrive, set out foods that won't spoil. Wrap them tightly to ensure freshness; tear off the wrap when the first doorbell rings.
- Give parents who are staying tasks to oversee.
They can help with games or supervise a craft, so you're free to run the show and keep kids from running amok.
- Enjoy your entertainment!
A great family entertainer will keep your guest young and old smiling & having fun. If any task need to be done now is the best time to catch up. Take plenty of pictures! Conrad & his team highly recommend serving food and cake after entertainment, by doing this there is a smaller chance of making a mess.
- Serve food and cake!
The birthday child gets the first slice of cake!
- Make a list of gifts and who gave them.
- Send everyone off with party favors.
Your child can hand them out and say thank you at the same time.

Birthday Party Planning Checklist

Two to Three Days After The Party

- Help your child send thank-you notes, and send your own to your helpers.

Good habits can start at any age.

Congratulations! You did it, you successfully planned and ran a beautiful birthday party for your child and made lasting memories along the way. Well done!
